

A Guide for Reviewing the Report

Organizational Management Analysis A Guide for Reviewing the Report

We are pleased to provide you with your Organizational Management Analysis Report. In providing this report for you, it means quite simply that you have made an investment in the managers and leaders in your company. By completing a CheckPoint 360° Competency Feedback Report, they are each setting an important foundation for progressive improvement toward their personal success and the success of the company.

The Organizational Management Analysis is another step in the CheckPoint 360° Competency Feedback System. The report is designed to give an overview of the information obtained from the completed CheckPoints of a given group of your managers. (The group of managers included in this report is noted in the upper right-hand corner of page 1 of each report). The information contained in this report will provide a factual summary of the perception of your management group with input from your managers' bosses, peers, and direct reports.

In its broadest sense, the report includes information to examine the culture of your company. It provides valuable insight regarding alignment of your management group to your company's goals and objectives. This report can also be used to gather information related to the expectations for the human capital aspects of your company's long-term strategic objectives. In a more directed information source, it provides Organizational Development Priorities and a detailed Organizational Training Needs Analysis.

Understanding the Organizational Management Analysis

You may want to keep this guide handy as you work your way through the Organizational Management Analysis (OMA) Report. It is important that you understand the information contained in this report. This understanding will help you to determine the most important aspect of the information as it relates to your company. Also, while the report recaps all the information included in the indicated group of managers, the exact meaning of the information will be subject to your relating the information to your company's plans and direction.

On the first page following the cover of the report, in the upper right-hand corner, you will note your company's name, the designated group of managers, the name of this report and the total number of participants (managers designated as "Self" in each CheckPoint report) and the total boss, direct report and peer respondents. Knowing the makeup of the participants and their bosses will be helpful in reading and applying the information provided.

The body of this page provides an introduction to your OMA. The introduction leads to the recap of the 8 Universal Management Competencies and the supporting 18 Skill Sets. Knowing and understanding the Competencies and Skill Sets is important as they relate to the application of the report. As you read the report you may want to reference back to these definitions and information related to the Competencies and Skill Sets.

After the recap of the Competencies and Skill Sets you will note a definition for the term “participant.” In each of the CheckPoints summarized in the OMA, the focus (or subject) of each report was designated as “Self” in their respective reports. In the OMA we will refer to them as “Managers.”

Reading the Report

When reading each section of the report, refer to the descriptions provided in this guide. Page numbers are not referenced for each area of the report because the number of pages will vary depending on the total number of Managers.

The Organizational Management Analysis has three sections. They are:

Part I – Executive Summary

Part II – Organizational Development Priorities

Part III – Organizational Training Needs Analysis

I. Executive Summary

Critical Skill Set Summary

As noted earlier, there are 18 Skill Sets. When Managers and Bosses entered their perceptions when completing the individual CheckPoints, they were asked to designate (independently) six (6) of the Skill Sets critically important to the particular requirements of the Manager's job.

The schedule indicates the rank order of Skill Sets selected by Managers and Boss(es). In each CheckPoint the items selected by the Manager and their Boss(es) were clearly indicated. The expectation is that upon completion and review of the reports Boss(es) and Manager discussed each item, particularly if there were differences in opinion.

Critical Skill Set Alignment

This schedule by Manager, in descending order, indicates the percentage of alignment between the Manager and their Boss(es) in selection of the Critical Skill Sets. The alignment of Critical Skill Sets (or lack thereof) can be helpful in gauging the effectiveness of relationships between the individuals and lend insight into the performance of each of the Managers in contributing to company objectives. The schedule also indicates percentage of overall alignment of the Manager and Boss(es).

Organizational Development Summary

This schedule presents a recap of the raters' perceptions of the Managers. The recap includes all raters (excluding the Managers' perceptions of themselves) and is listed by Skill Set. The CheckPoint uses a rating scale of 0 through 5, as follows:

- 0 ... Not Applicable
- 1 ... Never
- 2 ... Seldom
- 3 ... Sometimes
- 4 ... Usually
- 5 ... Always

Based on this 0-5 rating system, the favorable zone ranges between 3.5 and 4.25, where a Manager is looked upon as doing a consistently good job.

The report also indicates, in Column 2, the six (6) highest Skill Sets selected by Managers and Bosses (per the "Critical Skill Set Summary"). This will give you a comparison of what Managers and Bosses thought was the most important Skill Set compared to where raters thought Managers needed the most improvement.

This is an important schedule for development needs, Critical Skill Set perceptions and overall targeted corporate objectives, aims, goals and culture.

Organizational Development Summary – Direct Reports

Research has indicated that one of the most positive aspects of using 360° feedback in organizations is the opportunity for Direct Reports to be able to give honest, straightforward feedback to their respective department leaders. With that opportunity, it is important each Manager acknowledges the input and that the company is aware of the feedback. This schedule is presented to highlight feedback just from Direct Reports. The schedule is in the same format as the previous summary. The importance of this information and how to use it is at the discretion of each company.

Skill Set Comparative Analysis

This schedule is provided to give you a consolidated overview of the results of each Manager's CheckPoint. By Manager you can observe, for all 18 Skill Sets combined, how each of them was rated by themselves, their Boss(es), their Peers and their Direct Reports. The analysis will highlight a number of areas such as:

- How does each Manager see them self?
- Is there general agreement between Boss and Manager on the Manager's performance?
- Is there consensus of perception or significant variances? If so, what are the implications?
- Referencing the "Critical Skill Set Alignment" summary, note the correlation between the Manager's and Boss' perceptions.

There are any number of other types and kinds of information inferences that can be noted in the recap.

II. Organizational Development Priorities

This section of the report lists the 18 Skill Sets ranked in order as indicated in the Organizational Development Summary – All Raters. With each Skill Set noted, each Manager receiving a recommendation for improvement in that particular Skill Set will be listed. The percent below the favorable zone will be noted in descending order. The schedule will also list Managers that had ratings below the favorable zone, but the Skill Set was not listed as a recommendation as there were other Skill Sets in their respective CheckPoint reports requiring more attention. Also, any Managers who scored within or above the favorable zone and were not provided with any recommendations for approval will be listed. The total number of Managers listed will always be the total number of participants noted on page one of the report.

The use of this information will vary according to the needs of your company. This information will be used to pinpoint training and development needs for Managers and allow grouping of Managers for various training venues within your organization. Other uses may include a more detailed evaluation of each of your Managers and a review of their individual strengths and areas needing development.

III. Organizational Training Needs Analysis

This section of the report indicates the specifications for developing each Skill Set (By Skill Set, listed in the order indicated on the Critical Skill Set Summary.). One of the most important aspects of the CheckPoint 360° Feedback System is using the findings and information from each report for the development of each Manager. After sufficient time for development, a Manager can take another CheckPoint to measure the perceived changes and improvements. Subsequent CheckPoint reports highlight additional Skill Sets that can be developed, thus perpetuating a continuous improvement process.

Each of the 18 Skill Sets will be reviewed in this section of the report and outline specifics to be addressed when a Manager needs improvement in the Skill Set indicated.

The above information is provided to help get as much information as possible from the Organizational Management Analysis. Explanations, highlights and suggested subjective information ideas have been indicated. The amount and value of the information presented will be related to each company's perception of the managerial and leadership skills of its people and the relation of people to the company's goals, aims, mission, and cultural values.
